Social Media Platforms and Free Expression

In recent years, social media platforms have assumed increasing prominence in society. However, as their influence has expanded, there have been increasing calls for those platforms to regulate and even censor speech, particularly so-called "hate speech" and fake news. This panel will involve a comparative examination of how societies regulate social media platforms and the implications of social media censorship on democratic societies.

Discussion Group: Incorporating Racial Justice Issues in the Classroom

Monday, July 26

This discussion group focuses on incorporating racial justice issues in doctrinal courses and throughout the curriculum. Presenters will provide tips, strategies, and coverage/syllabus suggestions to help faculty address racial justice issues in their classroom. We invite additional participants who effectively incorporate these important issues in their own teaching to join the discussion. This discussion group is organized by West Academic Publishing and Foundation Press.

Moderator: Professor Meredith Duncan, University of Houston Law Center

Discussants: Professor Jenny Carroll, The University of Alabama School of Law; Professor Miriam Cherry, Saint Louis University School of Law; Professor Robert Dinerstein, American University, Washington College of Law; Professor Martha Ertman, University of Maryland

NEWER LAW PROFESSORS WORKSHOP

Discussion Group: Time Management for Newer Law Professors

This discussion group will address strategies, tips, and tricks designed to help newer (and older) law professors manage the many competing demands on their time. In particular, discussants will talk about how to craft a productive research and writing schedule while also meeting teaching and service obligations. The discussion group will also address how to manage such other time-intensive activities as preparing to teach a new course, grading, membership on work-intensive committees, and preparing for talks and conferences. The goal of the session is to give participants concrete ideas for increasing productivity while also reducing stress, anxiety, and burnout.

Moderator: Professor Tracy Pearl, The University of Oklahoma College of Law

Discussants: Professor Renee Allen, St. John's University School of Law; Professor Steven Friedland, Elon University School of Law; Professor Jamila Jefferson-Jones, Wayne State University Law School; Professor Joel Mintz, Nova Southeastern University Shepard Broad College of Law; Professor Christopher Odinet, University of Iowa College of Law; Professor Brie Sherwin, Texas Tech University School of Law; Professor Stacey Tovino, The University of Oklahoma College of Law; Professor Kyle Velte, University of Kansas School of Law

3:00 PM -5:00 PM*Monday, July 26*PROSPECTIVE LAW TEACHERS WORKSHOP*Navigating the Hiring Process

This panel is an important part of the Prospective Law Teachers Workshop, although it is open to all SEALS attendees. It gives the participants the ability to hear from an array of experienced faculty who have served on appointments committees in the past. Panelists discuss strategies to navigate the hiring market for law professors. Topics include the FAR form, the AALS and SEALS hiring initiatives, callbacks, the “job talk,” and post-offer negotiations.

Moderator: Professor Leah Chan Grinvald, Suffolk University Law School

Speakers: Professor Benjamin Cooper, The University of Mississippi School of Law; Professor Brannon Denning, Samford University Cumberland School of Law; Professor Corinna Lain, University of Richmond School of Law; Professor Leandra Lederman, Indiana University Maurer School of Law; Professor Shakira Pleasant, University of Illinois Chicago School of Law

3:00 PM -6:00 PM*Monday, July 26*ASPIRING LAW TEACHERS WORKSHOP*Discussion Group: Beating the Odds

Much advice and data exist about the preferred pedigree for law teaching. What if you don't look or sound like the standard applicant? For example: You didn't go to Harvard or Yale. You're a first-generation law school graduate. You don't have a Ph.D. You would represent an underrepresented group in academia. You're a nonconformist. Maybe you've practiced law for a long time. You're writing but not yet impressively published in the area in which you hope to teach. How can you overcome the odds to make it in academia? This panel explores long-term strategies, alternative paths, fellowships, and hybrid positions.

Moderator: Professor Colin Marks, St. Mary's University School of Law

Discussants: Professor Benjamin Cooper, The University of Mississippi School of Law; Professor Michael Higdon, The University of Tennessee College of Law; Professor Margaret Hu, Penn State Law; Professor Marc Roark, Southern University Law Center; Professor

Caprice Roberts, The George Washington University Law School;

WORKSHOP ON ONLINE EDUCATION

Discussion Group: The Business of Online Legal Education—
 Accreditors and External Stakeholders' Interests in Shaping Online Education

This panel introduces the participants to the wide range of internal and external stakeholders in legal education, including the ABA, educational publishers, technology partners, and others who are both helping the law schools deliver online and hybrid education and who are also shaping the choices available to law schools regarding the tools and environment in which to operate. The program will look at resources for faculty, the growth of online consortiums, issues involving verification of test-takers, and similar considerations.

Moderator: Dean Greg Brandes, St. Francis School of Law

Discussants: Mr. William Adams, American Bar Association Section of Legal Education and Admissions to the Bar; Ms. Sara Berman, AccessLex Institute; Ms. Pamela Siegel Chandler, West Academic; Professor Jon Garon, Nova Southeastern University Shepard Broad College of Law; Mr. Michael Gregory, The BarBri Group; Professor Max Huffman, Indiana University Robert H. WORKSHOP ON CRIMINAL LAW & CRIMINAL PROCEDURE

Discussion Group: From Police to Prisons: Pandemic & Post-Pandemic Reforms in the Criminal Legal System

This group addresses the possibilities for reforms regarding the wide variety of targets in the criminal legal system that have been drawn into the national spotlight by the protests of 2020 and the pandemic. Our topics include reforms related to the achievement of racial justice, the regulation or restructuring of the police and prosecutors, the strategy of decriminalization, and the impact of COVID19 on criminal prosecutions, including the impact on the right to counsel, the character of court proceedings, and the treatment of prisoners including compassionate release. What reforms are needed? If they are adopted, which ones might be likely to last?

Moderator: Professor Cynthia Alkon, Texas A&M University School of Law

Discussants: Professor Amber Baylor, Columbia Law School; Professor Jancy Hoeffel, Tulane University Law School; Professor Brooks Holland, Gonzaga University School of Law; Professor Neil Sobol, Texas A&M University School of Law; Professor Scott Sundby, University of Miami School of Law; Professor Anna VanCleave, University of Connecticut School of Law

Discussion Group: Silver Linings Playbook: Lessons Learned During a Pandemic

Tuesday, July 27

Participants in this discussion group share the lessons they learned teaching law during the pandemic. The discussion group explores best practices in online and blend-flex learning, challenges of both formats, and critical take-aways from the year. The group also addresses the teaching innovations and experiences that emerged as surprising, important lessons during this challenging year. These innovations and experiences include heightened faculty interest in pedagogy, new ways to connect with students, and teaching strategies that can be transferred to the post-pandemic world. Despite the difficulties, there were several “Silver Linings” from teaching law during the 2020-2021 academic year.

ASPIRING LAW TEACHERS WORKSHOP

Screening Interview Demonstrations and Debriefings

This panel exposes aspiring law teachers to the format and content of a typical screening interview through mock screening interviews for doctrinal, clinical, and legal writing positions. Experienced faculty act as mock interviewers, while new members of the academy who have recently been through the rigors of the job hiring market act as mock interviewees. After each interview, the group engages in an in-depth discussion with aspiring law teachers about question content, interviewing styles, and common mistakes made by applicants during screening interviews. Attendees who are not listed as discussants are not required to participate in the mock interviews but are invited to participate fully in the debriefing sessions.

Moderator: Professor Louis Virelli, Stetson University College of Law

Speakers: Professor Miriam Cherry, Saint Louis University School of Law; Professor Christopher Jaeger, New York University School of Law; Professor Anthony Kreis, Georgia State University College of Law; Professor Joy Radice, The University of Tennessee College of Law; Professor Anna Scardulla, University of North Carolina School of Law; Professor Vanessa Zboreak, Elon University School of Law

NEWER LAW TEACHERS WORKSHOP

Training Session on Mentoring Law Students

More than ever, law professors are called on to mentor law students. This highly interactive program addresses effective mentoring, including how to establish a relationship with a student while maintaining appropriate boundaries, addressing issues common to modern law students (e.g., managing time, learning to be a self-regulated learner), handling stress (and knowing one's limits and when to refer students for professional help), encouraging students to maintain perspective, exploring areas of law in which a student's talents would best fit and in which that student would have a sense of purpose. The presenters will work in small groups with the audience, perhaps role play, and provide hands on guidance on being an effective mentor.

Moderator: Professor Benjamin Madison, Regent University School of Law

Pollution and Its Impact on COVID-19, Health, Housing, and Learning

When a 9-year-old girl in London is declared dead from pollution, it makes us wonder how many more children are also being harmed. Pollution kills, and now there is at least one official coroner's report that "Air Pollution exposure" is the "Medical cause of death." The first step to resolving any problem is to name it. As Mayor Sadiq Khan of London said, "Toxic air pollution is a public health crisis, especially for our children, Ministers and the previous Mayor have acted too slowly in the past, but they must now learn the lessons from the Coroner's ruling and do much more to tackle the deadly scourge of air pollution in London and across the country." Reducing pollution will also reduce health disparities, ultimately resulting in improved housing, fewer chronic health conditions, fewer cases of COVID-19, and longer (and better quality) lives. One solution is to regulate cities' levels of toxic pollution, which may include moving toxic industries out of residential areas. Another is putting in strict pollution controls, as they have done in California. Of course, pollution is not the only factor creating such enormous health disparities, but it is one that many city leaders have ignored. There are many lessons of what not to do that leaders in other cities can learn from. What is the role of law schools in documenting and advocating for greater government intervention in regulating toxic pollution? What are the risks? Can the University be a fair umpire between industrial polluters and the needs of community? What level of responsibility do corporations have for the problem?

Bostock v. Clayton County: Causation Analysis

Bostock is a signal SCOTUS case for LGBTQ rights in employment under Title VII. Justice Gorsuch authored the majority opinion, which also introduces new causation standards. This panel will focus on the broad implications of Justice Gorsuch's "but for" causation analysis to be used in employment discrimination cases, and the implications of his logic to other laws utilizing "but for" causation. In particular, Gorsuch noted that discrimination need not be the "primary factor" in an adverse action but need only be a "but for" cause. The potential implications of his opinion on causation are sweeping across federal laws. AUDIENCE DISCUSSION WELCOME!

Discussion Group: Philosophical Perspectives on Freedom of Speech in a Liberal Democracy

Political theorists often argue that a well-functioning democracy requires an informed voting public. But freedom of speech allows the dissemination of deceptive and misleading assertions and outright misrepresentation of facts. How many restrictions of freedom of speech are justified by the need to preserve democracy? Which is the end and which the means? Is the purpose of democratic government the preservation of individual liberty of which freedom of speech is a part or is freedom of speech merely a means to a democratic government that can be restricted as much as necessary to preserve that end? Participants will offer philosophical perspectives on these and related questions.

Discussion Group: Planning Forward: Taking the Lessons We Have Learned from Emergency and Planned Distance Education

This panel has brainstormed and compiled 10 lessons learned from both the emergency and planned distance education experiment that each of us participated in since March 2020. These lessons learned have so improved our teaching and our students' learning experiences that we recommend retaining them in our post-pandemic classrooms. Examples include revising learning objectives and modernizing teaching and assessment methods; dealing with student motivation issues; and balancing asynchronous and synchronous teaching with a return to the physical classroom. We will also discuss teaching with compassion and rigor while avoiding becoming an “On-Demand” teacher, and we will explore some of the challenges both faculty and students will face as we return to a post-pandemic world. The panel is comprised of members of the Association of Legal Writing Directors’ Online/Distance Learning Committee.

ASPIRING LAW TEACHERS WORKSHOP

Discussion Group: Designing Your Teaching Package

This discussion group offers advice on determining your areas of teaching and research interests. The session explores the importance of connection to your research, passion, and expertise. Topics include how to articulate these connections and show flexibility. Discussants also weigh how aspirants might consider market demands and advise on how to research, compare, and adjust to varied institutional needs. Finally, the group suggests ways to communicate and develop individualized teaching approaches, including styles, methods, and tools.

Scholarship Fundamentals: Becoming a Productive and Fulfilled Scholar

This group of experienced scholars considers what is, and how to develop, a "scholarly agenda," the alternate routes to tenure and self-fulfillment, using colleagues and research assistants to help in the scholarly enterprise, the art or luck of publishing "well," the importance of presenting at conferences, and how to enjoy, and not dread, the scholarly process. The discussion includes the "nuts and bolts" of writing – where, when, what, and more. The group may break into smaller groups to discuss these issues with participants in depth in a more directed dialogue.

"Who, me? I'm not racist!": Addressing Implicit Bias in Legal Education

This panel focuses on the problem of implicit bias and efforts to address implicit bias in law schools. "Implicit bias" refers to attitudes or stereotypes towards people or events that affect one's understanding, actions, and decisions in an unconscious manner. Indeed, implicit bias is often unrecognized and is distinct from overt racism. The discussants address the topic from a range of perspectives, including improving access to legal education, addressing implicit bias within a law school, educating about implicit bias on an institutional level, and managing the effects of implicit bias from the perspective of those who experience it in their daily lives.

What's in a Job Talk

Panelists offer advice on best practices for job talks. They consider ideals such as authenticity, expertise, clarity, and delivery. They also examine how to harness key points from your work into digestible, yet provocative content that best showcases your ideas and what you bring to the intellectual discourse. Job talks not only forecast the scholar you are and will become but also model the type of teacher you will be. Discussants provide tips on how to handle tough questions from the faculty during your talk.

Initial Thoughts on Law Schools of 2050—An Academic Master Plan for the Future

Legal educators have bemoaned many of the challenges to modern legal education and the legal profession, including the cost of legal education, the scale of unmet legal needs, the limited scope of live-client legal education, the use of entrance tests for admission, the use of seat-time to measure progress, the lack of competency-based academic measurement, and many, many more concerns. The discussant will identify ideal traits for legal education in the law school(s) of 2050, the actions needed to create those changes, and the strategies needed to begin the process of change.

WORKSHOP ON LABOR AND EMPLOYMENT LAW

Discussion Group: Work in the Digital Age

This discussion group examines the impact of technology on the workplace and the laws that govern it. Innovations such as gig work platforms, virtual reality, artificial intelligence, and data analytics are already changing the workplace in significant ways and will increasingly do so in the future. Labor and employment laws, however, have not kept up with these changes and are liable to fall behind further as technology affects various issues, including job losses, changes in how work is performed, classification of workers, employment discrimination, privacy, disabilities, and health and safety.

Discussion Group: Your Next Article

Is my next idea one that will become a good article? Which idea should I focus on? I've done some initial research; where do I go now? Shall I take a different approach? These are common questions that new (and even experienced) scholars ask themselves as they progress with developing an idea into an article. The primary purpose of this panel is to provide New Scholars with input on the direction and development of their scholarship. It offers New Scholars an opportunity to present a developing piece or a few ideas about potential projects in an informal setting and receive feedback on their ideas. Additionally, this discussion group explores motivation, creativity, and the process for finding your next great idea.

Discussion Group: Black Lawyers Matter

In response to highly controversial, publicized police killings, the Black Lives Matter Movement's demand for racial justice is reverberating throughout our institutions, particularly in the Ivy Towers of academia. In response to this inflection point, university, and particularly law school, leadership has stepped up, committing time and resources to addressing systemic racism. This Discussion Group focuses on what law schools are doing and could be doing to purposefully create the next generation of Black lawyers. First, it identifies the current obstacles that Black students face in obtaining a law degree and it recognizes that past and present strategies have yet to maximize the talent in those seeking to become lawyers. Second, it proposes the Black Lawyers Matter Code (BLMC), a concrete action plan/model that law schools should adopt to bring about transformative change in successfully educating Black lawyers. And third, it argues why the BLMC will produce its stated goal and is good policy to address systemic racism.

Empirical Patent Law

The Empirical Patent Law panel features presentations relating to the empirical analysis of patent law and practice. The panelists' works-in-progress cover multiple aspects of the patent system, including patent litigation, the United States Patent & Trademark Office, and stakeholder strategies. Using a variety of datasets and methodologies, the panelists' works explore assertions, validity, patentability, and related issues. This is a timely discussion, as empirical studies of the patent system have been critical to the current debate on whether more patent reform is necessary.

WORKSHOP ON DISPUTE RESOLUTION

Discussion Group: Is Remote Justice Still Justice? Shifting Dispute Resolution Processes Online

Thursday, July 29

Due to COVID-19, many dispute resolution processes have shifted to a remote format. This discussion group explores the impact of that shift on facilitation, negotiation, mediation, and arbitration processes, and in specific practice areas, including criminal law and family law. Topics include whether these remote processes achieve just outcomes and how to teach these processes to better prepare students for the future. The discussants share observations and analysis based on their recent experience as advocates, neutrals, and empirical researchers and lessons learned from forcing students to rapidly enhance their technological skills during a period of massive disruption. The program examines how agile particular mechanisms and practice areas have been and whether they have successfully reinvented themselves.

Cultural Self-Awareness & Professional Identity Formation Across the Curriculum

Cognition and culture influence every aspect of human interaction.

They inform how people perceive, evaluate, and communicate information. To thrive in practice, then, law students' socialization to the legal profession should enhance, not undermine, their ability to understand how culture impacts the law, legal relations, and the lawyering process. Developing cultural self-awareness as part of professional identity formation is critical to this socialization. This panel brings together teacher-scholars from across the curriculum to discuss how they integrate cultural self-awareness and professional identity formation in their classrooms.

How to Create a Proposal: Best Practices for Marketing, Enrollment, and Instructional Design for Online Legal Masters and Hybrid JD Programs

Thursday, July 29

The online market presents a significant opportunity for law schools to increase their footprints and connect with a new audience of prospective students, yet 26% of all new online programs fail to report a single conferral. In this session, participants will learn how to successfully position programs to compete in the online marketplace. The panel addresses topics such as understanding market research and program viability, successfully breaking through the noise of competitive programs, and designing a program for optimal online delivery. Specific topics include: (1) understanding the market potential, both regional and nationwide; (2) tapping into quality enrollments and target markets; (3) developing processes and understanding emotional decision points necessary to create a program; (4) creating top-tier programs for an online modality and best practices for instructional design using learning theory and law-specific faculty interaction; and (5) ensuring quality student outcomes, assessment, and support.

WORKSHOP ON TAX LAW

Tax Reform in the 21st Century

This panel brings together tax policy experts from a variety of fields to consider ways the tax law can be reformed. Under consideration are wealth taxes, "tax loopholes", the role of the federal tax system in the taxation of legalized marijuana, and lessons the tax system can learn from pandemic relief. Presenters consider the implications of a variety of tax policy tools on these various topics.

SCOTUS: Post-RBG

Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg served on the U.S. Supreme Court for decades, becoming a pop-culture feminist icon known as "The Notorious RBG." In many but not all opinions, she led the liberal wing of the Court. She authored the majority opinion in the groundbreaking VMI case that gave women the right to attend the previously all-male military school. In many controversial 5-4 opinions, Justice Ginsburg penned impassioned dissenting opinions, which resulted in countless images of her picture with the words, "I dissent." She enjoyed a meaningful friendship, and sometimes unexpected concurring opinions, with Justice Antonin Scalia. This panel explores Justice Ginsburg's rich background, legal career, tenure, and legacy. Panelists also explore the future of the Court after losing RBG and adding Justice Amy Coney Barrett.

Discussion Group: "Wow - that was unexpected!": Deaning in a Time of Crisis

Deans and Associate Deans explore the challenges of the past year, including providing legal education during a pandemic; navigating political, social and racial justice issues with diverse faculty, staff, student and alumni stakeholders; generating philanthropy and revenue despite exhausted team members and fiscal upheaval for agencies, businesses, nonprofits and alumni; escalating costs and uncertain enrollment future; and maintaining a sense of community and hope against the backdrop of all of these challenges. While the discussion will provide a bit of catharsis, the purpose of the discussion group is to share ideas that were most successful in addressing these unexpected crises, and to strategize on building continued resilience as leaders, and among our communities, as we move forward.

WORKSHOP ON BUSINESS LAW

Discussion Group: First Things First: Is Short-Termism the Problem?

Recently, Ernst and Young prepared a "Study on Directors' Duties and Sustainable Corporate Governance" for the European Commission. The study is based on evidence collected from 1992 to 2018 that seems to show that the boards of directors of publicly held companies within the EU tend to focus on the short-term benefits of shareholders to the detriment of the company's long-term interests. We discuss the Study on Directors' Duties and its empirical findings. In the context of a new political and economic order, we discuss what that study means to corporate law and corporate governance in the United States. Finally, we discuss what "short-termism" means, if it exists and, if it does, whether it is as harmful as it sounds.

WORKSHOP ON INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY LAW

Intellectual Property Law, Culture, and Race

Recent scholarship has started to critically analyze the impact that intellectual property rights have on culture and race. Do intellectual property laws affect what type of cultural expressions are worthy of protection? Does race play a part in who benefits from intellectual property rights? What should the governance structure for the cultural expressions and traditional knowledge of indigenous peoples and local communities look like? The panel explores these questions, the answers to which may have significant implications, including the need to reform existing laws or justifying the creation of new systems in domestic and international intellectual property law.

Discussion Group: Online & Hybrid Learning Pedagogy Best Practices and Standards Development

The discussants will lead an audience conversation: "Since the publication of the 2015 best practices and model recommendations, what have we learned? What should the community be considering now?" Our goal for this discussion is to test whether there is an appetite for an updated set of best practice standards and model rules. Example discussion points include: How should the ABA and regional accreditors review online law classes? How should the accreditation standards consider non-JD online offerings? Some law schools report status differences between faculty who teach online and residential classes; how should this status difference be approached? Some law schools heavily use adjuncts to teach online law classes; is this a problem, and if so, what steps should be taken?

WORKSHOP ON HEALTH LAWPublic Health Law and Covid-19. Where Did We Go Wrong?

The COVID-19 pandemic has been a structural stress test for public health law. The American public has been inundated with confusing guidelines and mandates. The Supreme Court in Roman Catholic Diocese of Brooklyn NY v. Andrew Cuomo, 592 U. S. ____ (2020) struck down New York's restrictions on religious gatherings. The decision shows a major shift in enforcement of constitutional liberties while COVID-19 lingers. It also leads to the conclusion that the federal government and states have not done a very good job of ensuring a strong public health legal system. This panel addresses the mistakes made in the issuing, implementation and enforcement of the public health mandates and guidelines and the lessons learned since the pandemic began.

WRITING CONNECTIONS WORKSHOPReason on Trial: Interrogating and Disrupting the Legal Writing Canon

This presentation will explain how comparative rhetoric and critical rhetoric can be used to (1) understand the way law perpetuates and reinforces systems of privilege and power; and (2) can be used to interrupt and disrupt existing systems. By critically examining rhetoric and drawing on other rhetoric traditions, we seek to foster more just and equitable ways of thinking about and applying the law. We will demonstrate specific ways that traditional rhetoric (1) silences alternative voices and (2) privileges elite perspectives; reveal how interruption has been deployed to effect change; and discuss how to deploy Indigenous, African Diasporic, Asian Diasporic, and Latinx Rhetoric to create legal discourse in opposition to Western reasoning and analytic paradigms.

Discussion Group: T&E Pedagogy: Pushing Boundaries

Trusts & Estates, as an area of law, has a reputation for being old-fashioned and very much tied to the past. Trusts & Estates professors, however, have pushed boundaries in their classrooms by (a) harnessing the power of technology, especially over the past year; (b) using experiential learning; and (c) considering how to incorporate issues of race, gender, class, and culture. This discussion will explore learning goals, techniques, assessments, and other ideas for pushing these and other boundaries in the Trusts & Estates classroom.

WORKSHOP ON REMEDIES

Discussion Group: Remedies and Statutes

Discussants examine the intersection of remedies and statutes for sources and limits of power. To what extent are congressional efforts effective in discerning among remedies, operationalizing goals, and creating limits? Discussants also analyze court conformity, interpretation, and resistance to statutory strictures. To what extent do judges retain historic equity power if Congress has not explicitly removed such authority? What if statutory methods of interpretation lead to absurd results? We explore varied civil statutes affecting the SEC, FTC, IP, FCRA, and ACA, as well as other administrative and criminal statutes. These enforcement schemes raise serious issues of remedies, equity, severability, facial challenges, jury trial rights, and justiciability.

WORKSHOP ON BUSINESS LAW

Discussion Group: “Contract Creep”: The Legal Treatment of Business Entity Organic Documents as Contracts

In recent years, litigation on a variety of substantive legal matters—from limited liability company bankruptcies to bylaw litigation limits—has raised questions about the legal nature of second-order (i.e., non-chartering) business firm organic documents—corporate bylaws, partnership agreements, and limited liability agreements/operating agreements. Are these important documents contracts, quasi-contracts, or neither? If they are not contracts, should they be treated or interpreted as contracts? And how do the answers to these questions impact the rights and responsibilities of equity holders and others engaged in and with these business associations? This discussion group explores these and other related questions.

Curriculum Changes Caused by COVID-19: What We Love, and What We Love to Hate

Many of us were traditionalists before the COVID-19-induced switch to a virtual classroom. This panel, made up of members of the Association of Legal Writing Directors' Online/Distance Education Committee, will discuss curriculum changes to both skills and doctrinal courses brought on by the move to the virtual classroom. Some we love, and some we love to hate. But many of the changes are here to stay. The panel will discuss those changes in the context of their suitability to our current Gen-Z cohort of students, and their relation to current ABA standards governing law school teaching and assessment.

Team Based Learning for International Collaboration, Simultaneous and Otherwise.

The SEALS Global Outreach Committee is hosting a panel on Team Based Learning for International Collaboration. This panel discusses the benefits of international collaboration in online classes and discusses ways various professors have incorporated innovative ways to teach comparative law, international law, comparative criminal procedure, constitutional law, and administrative law using "team-based learning." International collaboration excites many students all without leaving the comfort of home. Participants from the U.S. and E.U. will attend and participate to discuss future collaborations.

WRITING CONNECTIONS WORKSHOP

Balance in the Age of Covid-19

This panel will explore how legal writing faculty members have sought and achieved balance in the age of COVID-19. With this pandemic raging in the midst of civil unrest and political transitions, it has become harder to find and achieve personal and professional balance. In times of social distancing, our homes have become our offices and classrooms. Achieving balance is a highly personalized experience that requires looking at the variety of roles each of us plays in our families, communities, classrooms, and institutions. For these reasons, the panelists will share their personal experiences in seeking balance during these trying times with the hope of providing guidance to others searching for balance moving forward.

WORKSHOP FOR ASSOCIATE DEANS FOR RESEARCH

Discussion Group: Faculty Research & Development Deans—Promoting Scholarship in Challenging Times

This roundtable discussion addresses how faculty deans can develop and apply the skills essential for their work and their faculties. Particular attention is paid to how associate deans lead effectively, how institutions best promote faculty scholarship, and how an institution should develop strategies based on institutional and individual challenges. The group seeks to address specific questions along these topics, including how to craft ideal strategies for guiding faculty (individually and collectively), how institutions should market their work to a diverse array of constituent audiences, and how a mentorship relationship interacts with the committee on promotion and tenure.

restructuring, and reforming the Supreme Court and the federal courts. Following the failure to confirm Merrick Garland in 2016 and the appointment of Amy Coney Barrett in the weeks before the 2020 election, reforming the Supreme Court and the federal judiciary rose to the political agenda. A broad range of proposals have circulated among legal scholars, activists, and elected officials, including: expanding the size of the Supreme Court; imposing term limits; reworking how judges are placed on the Court; creating party seats; and adding lower-court judges. As a discussion group, the program will allow for a number and broad range of voices on the issues.

Discussion Group: T&E Scholarship Discussion Group - Current and Evolving Trusts & Estates Scholarship

Scholarship in the Trusts & Estates field is dynamic and expanding. Until recently, trusts and estates law primarily concerned mechanisms for the effective transfer of wealth and it was the province of dry formalities. There was widespread consensus over a series of core principles and concepts basic to the field. New scholarship, however, seeks to challenge this traditional approach and to bring alternative perspectives to the core meanings and concepts of trusts and estates. The scholarship today uses a variety of methodologies and lenses. In this discussion group, participants have an opportunity to present their current research and explore symmetries and differences between their various scholarly projects.

WORKSHOP ON TAX LAW

Discussion Group: Tax Law

This discussion group is broadly concerned with issues of taxation. Discussants will address individual income tax, corporate income tax, state & local tax, estate & gift tax, tax expenditure policy, international tax, and entitlements. While these disparate themes might seem only loosely related, a common thread of the difficulties of balancing equity, simplicity, incentives, and transparency runs through all of them. These scholars grapple with the central tax topics of the day, and address the looming concerns that must be dealt with by all levels of government.

WORKSHOP ON ACADEMIC FREEDOM IN AN ERA OF CHANGE
Academic Freedom in an Era of Change

Academic Freedom is a core principle and value of higher education in the United States and other countries. It embodies important rights and responsibilities, and it can be threatened or infringed in various ways, such as due to political or institutional pressures. In addition, focus on academic freedom can become subsumed or entangled with challenging issues of free speech on campus. This panel will address rights and responsibilities of academic freedom, how it interplays with freedom of speech, and the impact of academic freedom for law faculty, staff, and students.

WORKSHOP ON TAX LAW
Tax Law, Policy, and Human Beings

Sometimes we forget, but real live human beings (and dead ones!) are subject to the income tax. The presenters on this panel consider the myriad ways that the income tax responds to and is shaped by the choices human beings make. In particular, papers in this panel address the rise of telework, the effect of the tax system on the cost of death, tax and the cyborg, and the human factor in the economic calculus.

WORKSHOP ON LABOR AND EMPLOYMENT LAW

Discussion Group: Post-Election Preview: Labor and Employment Law under a New Biden Administration

There is a strong consensus that the Trump Administration had a negative impact on the interests and rights of organized labor and on more general workplace protections and equality. What will it mean for the field of labor and employment law to have a Democratic President and a Democratic-controlled Congress? This discussion group explores how the Biden Administration might influence labor and employment laws. It previews both what we expect might happen and what we hope will happen with respect to legislative, regulatory, and executive reforms.

WORKSHOP ON CIVIL PROCEDURE

Discussion Group: Civil Procedure Roundtable on Adjudication

The adjudication process is constantly evolving, including the pandemic-related shift to predominantly virtual proceedings. The pretrial stage continues to be emphasized under both Twiqbal's stringent pleading regime and recent federal rules changes, including major discovery revisions. State legislatures are superseding prior state common-law doctrine in statutory enactments that intermix substance and procedure, resulting in new Erie issues in federal courts. Challenges are arising in the rare cases reaching a jury verdict regarding impeaching the jury's deliberations and the deference to be afforded to the jury's verdict. The appropriate scope of remedial relief at the end of the adjudication process is also subject to continuing debate. This discussion group will address such current procedural issues related to the adjudication process.

Discussion Group: Current Issues in Immigration

The narrative was "us versus them." Rightful U.S. citizens versus the invading masses. These contrasting depictions were arguably a national obsession with the election of Donald Trump in 2016, and what many believe was his unrelenting verbal and policy war against immigrants while in office. He began his presidential bid by targeting

Saturday, July 31

Mexican immigrants, and since taking office, his rhetoric concerning tough immigration policies were purported to be a top priority for his administration. Trump used this sort of theater to create nationalistic fervor amongst U.S. citizens, and to demonize the so-called invasion at our borders. Now that Trump lost is it really a new day for immigrants and immigration reform?

WOLTERS KLUWER LUNCHEON: INTRODUCING THE NEW CONNECTED EBOOK

Connected Casebooks are now called Connected eBooks, and the name is not the only thing changing.

Join Nicole Pinard, Maureen Kenealy, and Valerie Saeger of Wolters Kluwer Legal & Regulatory for a delicious lunch on Saturday July 31st in Magnolia D and be the first to see the new and improved CasebookConnect experience coming later this summer.

CasebookConnect is a platform of complementary learning tools created to help law students learn more efficiently and effectively through formative assessments (Connected Quizzing), enhanced digital textbooks (Connected eBooks), practice questions (Study Center), and animated videos (PracticePerfect). During the presentation, you will learn about how students are using technology to prepare for class, assess their understanding of material, and improve their outcomes using CasebookConnect. Our presenters will share insights collected from research with law students—including how students are using digitally-enhanced textbooks today and how the new CasebookConnect experience is designed to further promote student engagement and learning. You'll also get a sneak peak of upcoming professor capabilities to engage your students.

The ELPIS Approach: How the Pandemic Changed the Face of Law, as Well as Law Teaching and Learning

ELPIS is one of the oldest and biggest Law networks in Europe, founded by the Leibniz University of Hannover, composed of 34 European Law Faculties together with associated faculties from America, Asia and Africa. The network deals with issues relating to Students, Professors and Staff members, as well as questions related to pedagogical theory and practice. ELPIS is currently divided into three branches: ELPIS organizes an Annual Meeting; ELPIS offers a joint masters degree that includes the law faculties of Hannover, Rouen, Lisbon, Fribourg and Mykolas Romeris (Vilnius); the ELPIS Research arm that runs research and scientific projects and a v-Law Review. In the last 2 years the ELPIS network has organized some scientific events and a special volume of the ELPIS v-Law Review which was dedicated to the changes that the pandemic brought to a law, as well as to law teaching and learning, and about the predictable consequences of these novelties for the near future. And these are precisely the topics we will present and discuss in this panel.

Bias and Disparate Outcomes in the Bar Examination

This panel will discuss how bar examinees from communities of color or who are neurodivergent (including examinees with learning disabilities and mental health challenges) are adversely affected by bias in the bar exam. Studies show that bar examinees from communities of color have lower pass rates than their white peers. Neurodivergent examinees encounter a range of impediments to success on the bar resulting in their underperforming their neurotypical peers. If the legal profession is to be more representative of the population as a whole, it must eliminate artificial barriers that act to reinforce racial and neurological biases. This panel seeks to help expand the conversation about these problems so we may, as a community, work together to solve them.

The Evolution of Legal Storytelling

Lawyers have used storytelling for some time to get judges' attention and to further their clients' cases. But as these techniques have become widespread and accepted as effective methods of legal advocacy and forms of legal reasoning, their use has evolved. Panelists will discuss the evolution of contemporary storytelling and narrative techniques by lawyers and judges alike. In particular, panelists will consider the relationship between the law and the advocate's ability to tell an effective story, how courts use narrative in decision-making, and whether and how these uses of narrative advance or obscure the search for justice.

Helping International Students Succeed at American Law Schools: Overcoming Cultural and Other Challenges

Law schools have LLM programs for international students as well as students in their JD programs from countries other than the United States. International students matriculating at American law schools face a unique set of challenges, including language differences, cultural and political acclimation, as well the need to adopt new and different study habits. Faculty mentors, student mentors, and program directors play an important role in terms of helping these students navigate life in a new country and educational environment. This panel will discuss the types of issues international students face when attending American law schools and how we can help students address those concerns and ensure student success.

Discussion Group: Academic Freedom Around the Globe

Academic Freedom can face political, cultural, institutional, and economic pressures, and these dynamics can vary from country to country, or even across regions or jurisdictions within a country. In particular, restrictions on academic freedom can be used to stifle political dissent through both censorship and self-censorship, and thus present both human rights and anti-democratic concerns. This discussion group will bring together law faculty from various countries for a comparative discussion of threats to academic freedom; the relationship between academic freedom and personal statements or political activism; the political, cultural, institutional, and economic implications of working in restrictive environments; and steps that might be considered to protect academic freedom.

WORKSHOP ON CIVIL PROCEDURE

Discussion Group: Civil Procedure Roundtable: Jurisdiction and Court Access

The roadblocks to court access are a perennial concern for procedural scholars. Personal jurisdiction limitations, the hegemony of contract over court access with both arbitration and, to a lesser degree, forum selection clauses, class actions reforms, and the crushing centralization of MDL are frequent obstacles to plaintiffs securing convenient forums to assert their claims. Of particular note this year is the Supreme Court's upcoming decision in Ford Motor Co. v. Montana Eighth Judicial District Court, which presumably will provide some guidance on personal jurisdiction's nexus requirement. Yet undoubtedly additional doctrinal and theoretical issues will remain after Ford. This discussion group will provide an opportunity for procedural scholars to address jurisdictional issues and other roadblocks to accessing a convenient forum.

Discussion Group: Feeling Property

Despite the rational-choice discourse that dominates property scholarship and judicial opinions, owners' conduct is often governed by something unruly and unspoken—feelings. The law of ownership is shot through with litigation over spite fences, border disputes, spring guns, and fox carcasses, much of which beggars rational-choice explanation. Yet law-and-emotions insights have failed to migrate into the property discourse. The connection to emotion in this context is particularly salient, since ownership is bound up with notions of home, safety, personal history, wealth, status, and identity so that any legal allocation or denial of property rights impacts the emotions. This discussion group will investigate the inevitable connection between property law and human feelings, and to explore what law should do about it.

Discussion Group: Reproductive Justice Scholarship & Pedagogy Discussion Group

As both the political and scientific landscape rapidly shift, issues of reproductive justice are increasingly complicated and urgent. Additionally, scholarly interest in reproductive justice has expanded beyond traditional reproductive rights topics into a broader array of areas that better reflect the variation in the lived experiences of individuals. The participants will discuss their own scholarly or pedagogical approaches to reproductive justice issues, areas of overlap and divergence, and areas for future inquiry, as well as invite audience participation and discussion.

WORKSHOP ON BUSINESS LAWDiscussion Group: Insider Trading and Markets

Although the received policy underpinnings of insider trading regulation in the United States focus on deception the deception of individuals, commentators have argued that both investors and markets are harmed by it. Accordingly, as Congress considers statutory reforms to insider trading law, it is important to consider how insider trading affects share pricing, access to capital, liquidity, market volatility, market confidence, the flow of information, and other market-related concerns. If the principal harms of insider trading are imposed on markets rather than individuals, then any proposed reform should reflect this reality. At a minimum, reform should reflect inevitable trade offs between the values of fairness, equity, and efficiency. This discussion group will address these and other related questions.

WORKSHOP ON LABOR AND EMPLOYMENT LAW

Discussion Group: Pedagogical Trends in Teaching Employment Discrimination

Pedagogical Trends and Techniques in Employment Discrimination: This discussion group focuses on best practices for teaching Employment Discrimination. Because this area of law so often resonates with or is altered by current events that unfold during a semester, it is vital to keep students abreast of developments and to be able to seamlessly integrate those developments into a pre-set syllabus. The discussion focuses on 1) best practices employed by professors in this area to keep classes fresh, current, and flowing; 2) examples of when and how current events have been successfully integrated into a class discussion or syllabus; and 3) new and innovative ideas when it comes to the selection of assigned course material; teaching, and discussion-leading for classes.
